DESCRIPTION OF THE BOOK ELDRAD MUST DIE!

A nuclear icebreaker, foundering in Arctic waters. Seabirds washed up in the fishing resort of Ambermouth, their wings encrusted with crystals. A shining artefact of uncertain provenance, up for sale on an auction site. All of these things are linked, as the Doctor, Nyssa, Tegan and Turlough are about to discover.

What's it about: 'A Doctor, curse his name, threw me down among the dead... but I endure.' I am Eldrad... and I must live! A nuclear icebreaker, foundering in Arctic waters. Although 'Eldrad Must Die!' is unlikely to go down as a classic, it nonetheless tells an intriguing tale that highlights the versatility and standards of production quality that Big Finish Doctor Who has come to represent. Eldrad Must Die! was the first story in the 2013 Fifth Doctor audio trilogy. Eldrad was first encountered by the Fourth Doctor, who doubted the fall on Kastria killed. Eldrad Must Die! is an unnecessary sequel to, The Hand of Fear. Like with Robophobia, the story seems to be taking a different twist. Unlike Robophobia, the twist doesn't lead to anything mind blowing, but rather perfectly ordinary for Doctor Who. Eldrad Must Die! is an unnecessary sequel to, The Hand of Fear. Eldrad crafted a poison dart that would corrode another Kastrian body with acid. Once possessed and encased in crystal, Turlough/Mulkris is able to use the armour as an energy weapon. The Watcher is a crystal cut in the shape of an eye. 'I am eldrad, and i must live'-Eldrad I have absolutely no clue why i bought this story when it was released in 2013, i dont own many monthly ranges and will always be puzzled as to why i bought this one. Doctor Who has 61 ratings and 6 reviews. Jamie said: This is, rather obviously, a sequel to the TV story The Hand of Fear. The opening sections of the st... ELDRAD MUST DIE!
