DESCRIPTION OF THE BOOK KI-61 AND KI-100 ACES

This is the story of the elite Japanese Army Air force (JAAF) aces that flew the Kawasaki Ki-61 Hien (Swallow), and the Ki-100 Goshikisen in the Pacific Theatre of World War 2. The former, codenamed 'Tony' by the allies, was a technically excellent aircraft, possessing power, stability and a good rate of climb - differing radically from the usual Japanese philosophy of building light, ultra-maneuvrable fighters. Its pilots soon realised, however, that the type was plagued by a number of dangerous mechanical issues. Then as the war moved relentlessly closer to Japan's doorstep, a desperate, expedient innovation to the Ki-61 airframe by fitting it with a radial instead of inline engine resulted in one of the finest fighters of World War 2 - the Ki-100. This book uses the latest findings to provide a gripping account of some of the most remarkable and hard-pressed fighter pilots of the war. It reveals how these men, unlike so many of their unfortunate late-war colleagues, could surprise Allied aircraft in high-performance fighters and claim successes in the face of enormous odds.

The Ki-100 development was forced, due to the inability of the inline engines to keep pace with the Ki-61 airframe's production. At the end of 1944, more than 200 airframes were piled up, all lacking engines. Summary. This is the story of the elite Japanese Army Air force (JAAF) aces that flew the Kawasaki Ki-61 Hien (Swallow), and the Ki-100 Goshikisen in the Pacific Theatre of World War 2. The Ki-61 would be no aerobat like the Ki-27 or Nakajima Ki-43 Hayabusa (Peregrine Falcon), Allied reporting name 'Oscar' (see Aircraft of the Aces 85 - Ki-43 'Oscar' Aces of World War 2 for further details), but its other flight characteristics, protection and armament were expected to more than compensate for that quality. Synopsis. The Ki-61 'Men' (Flying Swallow) was the only inline-engined (liquid-cooled) monoplane fighter to be used operationally by the Japanese armed forces during World War 2, and when first encountered by Allied pilots was presumed to be of German origin rather than a homegrown machine.
