We as hunters have an obligation to our sport/hobby/career to be as professional and ethical as the times demand. We owe it to ourselves and more so to the animals that we hunt, to put our ego,s away and do the right thing. However, to look at it that way is to discredit the true reality of the best hunters and to degrade our sport as whole. Even though bowhunting is often a solitary endeavor and experience, rarely do we go at it alone. There's some great hunters on this list for sure. However I can't see how the names Chuck Adams, Myles Keller, and Dan Fitzgerald can be left off this list. These guys all had a HUGE impact on bow hunting, hunting videos, and the hunting industry in general. I guess many hunters are the reason why so little respect remains for your sport and while hunting organizations continue to hide behind the facts more and more people will continue to turn against you!
