DESCRIPTION OF THE BOOK MECHANISMS IN WORLD AND MIND : PERSPECTIVE DUALISM, SYSTEMS THEORY, NEUROSCIENCE, REDUCTIVE PHYSICALISM

The topic of the reduction of mental processes to biophysical mechanisms touches at the core of the mind-body problem, a puzzle in the philosophy of mind since the days of Descartes. This book is about philosophical aspects of neuroscience, centred on perspective dualism. The topic unfolds in the discussion of mechanisms in world and mind. Neuronal mechanisms of differing complexity are described in a general way. It is shown how models of such mechanisms may be classified and assigned to levels of systems theory. Reduction strategies are applied to processes of life, mind, and consciousness. The aim is physicalistic, to explore if and how the mental may be understood in terms of biophysics and its mechanisms.

The topic of the reduction of mental processes to biophysical mechanisms touches at the core of the mindbody problem, a. This is relevant to consciousness studies because if the traditional Christian God exists in a separate realm of spirit, intervening in the material world, then dualism is true, the mind-body problem is solved, and the hard problem of consciousness takes on a very different, more theological, character. This version of non-reductive physicalism has to be distinguished from an ontological version, which is best described as token-physicalism, or token-token identity theory. Token-physicalism is the view that what occurs in our world is just physical; however, mental types are not identical to physical types. First, physicalism is a denial of body-soul or body-mind dualism. Second, the term "nonreductive" signals denial of the supposition that physicalism also entails the absence of human meaning, responsibility, and freedom. In the philosophy of mind, dualism is the theory that the mental and the physical—or mind and body or common sense tells us that there are physical bodies, and because there is intellectual pressure towards producing a unified view of the world, one could say. Property dualism (double aspect theory) mind & matter are aspects of a single underlying substance -> impossible to study mental processes as properties/products of the brain The mind-body problem is a philosophical problem concerning the relationship between thought and consciousness in the human mind and the brain as part of the physical body. Identity theory is a family of views on the relationship between mind and body. Type Identity theories hold that at least some types (or kinds, or classes) of mental states are, as a matter of contingent fact, literally identical with some types (or kinds, or classes) of brain states. The earliest.
